

Trinity Jubilee Foundation Annual Report 2017

President's Report

The Trinity Jubilee Foundation is pleased to welcome Mary Heather White to the Board of Directors. Continuing members are Liz Harper, Dave Gibb, Steve Dunn, Irene Savage, Gloria Sorge, Murray McBride, and Rosemary Gibb.

Over the past year donations to TJF were made in memory of Viola Hovey, Alex McKeague and Jane McKeague. The McKeague family expressed pleasure that an overwhelming 63 donations were received in Jane's memory.

The generous support of the Trinity congregation allowed TJF to fund the following 5 programs in 2017:

Inter Pares is a Canadian social justice organization which partners with Likhaan, a women's health organization in the Philippines. Likhaan trains local women to provide health care and it is involved politically to change the laws in the Philippines that negatively impact women's reproductive health. On October 29, 2017, several TJF board members met with Jack Litster and David Bruer from Inter Pares, who brought with them Arnold Vega from the Likhaan Centre for Women's Health in the Philippines. We received an update on how TJF funding was being used in the Likhaan Centre. The four clinics, which serve 30,000 patients annually, hope to be self-sufficient in four more years via government grants. Likhaan also nurtures youth groups in the areas of reproductive health and LGBTQ rights. Inter Pares was awarded $5000 this year to continue their work with Likhaan.

EcoEquitable also received $5000. This is an Ottawa-based charity that teaches sewing skills to disadvantaged and immigrant women. Once they acquire these skills, the women are helped to find employment, with the goal being self-sufficiency. A report in September 2017 indicated that 85% of the graduates were either working or furthering their education through secondary or post-secondary institutions. The availability of subsidized tuition ensures that everyone, no matter their financial situation, is able to access programming that will support employability and integration.

Care Canada is a leading international development and humanitarian organization fighting global poverty. It was awarded $3000 to fund their Healthy Moms, Healthy Babies initiative in Malawi, Zimbabwe and Mozambique. Work is done with families and health authorities to make improvements in agriculture, nutrition, clean water, sanitation, and gender equity. Their Village Savings and Loan Associations strengthen women's abilities to earn a living and feed their families.

War Child received $1000 to help alleviate the effects of war on South Sudanese children. It focuses on the educational and vocational training of local teachers to bring education to students who have been unable to attend school due to the devastating effects of war. This was the second year that TJF supported War Child. The current situation in the South Sudan is extremely volatile and dangerous.

Water Aid Canada received $1000 for the "Clean Water for Schools Project" in Kenya, Uganda and Ethiopia. This project provides access to safe water, basic toilets, and hygiene education on the grounds of 24 schools. Students no longer get sick from drinking the water at school. Girls in particular are benefiting from the water and hygiene programs. They no longer have to miss school due to their menstrual cycles but now can deal with menstrual hygiene using the school facilities. This has greatly improved their attendance. WaterAid works with locally-based partner organizations who understand the local environment. Simple, low cost technologies that communities can easily maintain are installed. The emphasis is on local ownership, strong community participation and capacity building.

The $15,000 allocated to these five projects was matched by another $76,500 contribution by the Government of Canada. These donations will help disadvantaged people the world over strive to become healthier, better educated and more self-sufficient.
